

Colin 224686: What to Expect

Colin is a graduate of the Behavior Modification Program and needs a special home. Colin is a shy, sensitive boy who is ready to find his forever home. Colin needs an understanding owner that is experienced with feline body language and has the time and desire to allow him to acclimate in his own time. Colin may never be a social butterfly with everyone he meets, but he will bond with someone when given the time he needs to get to know you.

Colin was originally adopted from OHS as a shy, fearful kitten when he was 2 months old. For the last 6 years he has lived in a calm, quiet, adult only home with several other kitties. In this previous home he was described as a shy boy who mostly kept to himself but enjoyed warm beds to lay on and looking at wildlife out the window. Colin was not known to be super snuggly in his previous home and was happy to just be nearby his human, watching and observing the daily activities.

Colin was brought back to OHS in August of this year due to his owner moving into a care facility. When he returned, he displayed fearful, shy behavior and was avoidant of being pet. Due to Colin's history of being shy and nervous, the decision was made to place him in our Behavior Modification Program. The environment in the BMOD program is more conducive to helping cats feel comfortable in a shelter environment. With the larger kennel space, access to windows, and increased one on one time with the team we set out to learn more about him and help him overcome his fears.

When he first arrived in the Behavior Modification program Colin would continuously hide and cower in his hidey bed. Any attempt at petting him would result in him swatting and growling at us. This was his way of saying, "I'm very scared, please don't touch me." We worked on building trust and confidence by talking to him calmly and getting him used to our presence by sitting in his kennel. Over several months, Colin stopped hiding and now regularly perches on his cat tower and moves around in his kennel. He loves Temptation treats, and we would offer him some to build a positive association with people. He regularly looks forward now to visitors coming into his kennel to offer him treats. Colin continues to be fearful of being touched with hands, so we have not pushed this with him. He is happy to be nearby people, snacking on treats and watching bird videos but any attempt at petting him results in him backing away or swatting at us if we do not respect his boundaries. Colin is still working on being touched with hands and will need an experienced, calm, and patient person to help him with his progress. Colin may never be the snuggly, cuddly kitty that we all want him to be, but he does enjoy being around people. He's happy to observe the world around him, being close by people, but isn't overly affectionate or needy. Colin is very good at communicating with his body language when he is comfortable and when he is feeling overwhelmed or scared. His new owners should be well versed in feline body language.

His new family should expect that he will hide for a few weeks, possibly longer. You'll need to introduce him to new things slowly. Colin typically flees, hides, and may bite when overwhelmed or scared. It's important to provide him with a small room with appropriate hiding spots for him to relax in, such as his own hidey bed. Hiding spots that are confined to a tight spot and out of reach from you will make it difficult to build a bond with him. The room you set him up in will be the catalyst for how quickly he acclimates. Start thinking now which room in your home would be best for Colin to settle into. If it's a bedroom, can he get under the bed or dresser making it difficult to spend time with him? If it's a laundry room or bathroom will the constant in and out of people and noises associated with these rooms be too much for him? By having a room without a lot of foot traffic and with appropriate hiding spots, it will allow you to work on building a relationship. While in his hiding spot, use calm voices and offer tasty treats to show you are not a threat. Place a small amount of a wet food or a treat on a spoon and offer it to Colin while in his hidey spot. Over time, by continuing to do this, Colin will become more comfortable and recognize that yummy food = people, therefore creating a positive association between the two.

Here's how to help Colin during your first months together:

This step is crucial in helping Colin acclimate to his new home. Confine Colin to one cat-proof room in your house. Provide Colin with a litter box, food, water, and a bed. Ensure he cannot get to inappropriate hiding spots (under the bed, in a closet, on top of a cabinet, etc.). Provide him with a safe, comfortable hiding place instead like his cat carrier, a hidey-bed, or a large dog crate covered with a blanket.

Spend time with Colin in his room. Don't force him out of his hiding spot. Instead, encourage him to come out on his own using happy talk, offering a toy or treats. Once he is using the litter box, eating regularly, and coming out of hiding to interact with you, you can start introducing him to the rest of your home. Start by propping the door open and allowing him to come out on his own. Don't force it! If you come across something that you can tell Colin is worried about, allow him to hang back or hide if he chooses to do so.

Continue to provide a safe space. Even when Colin has started exploring the rest of the house, give him a safe space that he can retreat to. When he is in his safe space, insist that guests leave him alone and try to ignore him yourself. That way, when he comes out, you can reward his bravery with your attention.

No visitors (at first). Allow Colin time to adjust to your house, routine, and lifestyle before introducing him to new people. When you have visitors over, give Colin the freedom to make the decision to interact (or not!). Ask new people to ignore him – or if Colin seems curious or interested, have the new person toss him treats or offer a favorite toy. We want exciting, good things to come from new people.

Practice crate training. Leave his carrier out all the time, so it's just a part of his normal environment. Add a bed and keep the door securely propped open so he can go in and out on his own, making sure the door won't swing shut and frighten him. You can also clicker train him to run into the carrier on cue. Helping Colin get comfortable with his carrier will make it easier when it's time to visit the vet.

Visiting the vet: Unless it's an emergency, give Colin time to bond to you before taking him to the vet. Vet visits will more than likely be scary, but if he already trusts you, your presence may help him feel more comfortable.

Patience will come in handy for you. Colin is a cat that needs an understanding owner who has the time and desire to allow him to adapt in his own time. He may never be a social butterfly, and that's okay! Getting to know him and watching him come out of his shell will be extremely rewarding. Celebrate those small victories.

We're here to help!

We want Colin to be successful in his new home. We're available to answer questions via phone and email. Call the Behavior Helpline at (503)416-2983 or email Erika at erikas@oregonhumane.org to connect with the Feline Services Manager.

Please keep in touch so we can continue to help you and Colin now and in the future. Please reach out if you have any questions or concerns – or just to give an update. We love to see photos and hear how our friends are doing!

Thank you for adopting from the Oregon Humane Society. Congratulations on your new cat!
